Article Review: "The Mighty Bow Hand"

(Henry Bertram)

I had the pleasure of spending a few hours in the Emergency Room at Dominican Hospital recently and found myself reading the December 2008 issue of Bow & Arrow Hunting magazine. Somewhere amongst the stories of elk and deer hunting, I found "The Mighty Bow Hand," an article written by Denny Sturgis Jr. about the correct bow hand position, a relaxed grip and using a bow sling.

There were some quotes from reasonably well known archers that brought the relaxed grip into better focus including one by Santa Cruz Archers's own Larry Yien, 3 time IFAA World Longbow Champion.

We didn't quite have enough people come out for the club shoot this month to have an official shoot (an official shoot takes three). Denise and Henry had a great time flinging arrows.

Non Stump Shoot

Saturday morning came and went and I was knee deep (quite latterly) in our pond that had been half emptied during it's annual cleaning. The work had to be completed. And I completely forgot about the stump shoot. I asked around a bit after the fact and I think I would have been alone anyway but, if you were there, or you were locked out, please tell me what happened.
